Native American Law and Sovereignty
Institute

Specialize in Native American Law

Mitchell Hamline's Native American Law and Sovereignty Institute is unique because our professors provide students with a high degree of individual attention. Faculty guide students through a specialized track featuring introductory courses such as Federal Indian Law and Introduction to Tribal Law. Advanced courses cover topics including Indian child welfare, gaming, treaty rights, and many more. Students can compete in a national moot court competition and participate in clinics that offer real-world contributions to society and the law.

Native Justice Scholarships

Native Justice Scholarships are available to students in all enrollment options. Eligible students will pay no more than $40,000 for their J.D.—excluding summer and J-Term courses. (The percentage equivalent of the scholarship will be applied to those extra terms.)

Blended-Learning Enrollment Option

With just a few weeks per year on campus, you can study the law at Mitchell Hamline. And you can do it from anywhere in the world. Our four-year, part-time program is designed for students who want to stay in their community.

Gateway LSAT Preparation Scholarship

This scholarship covers the cost to participate in an online LSAT preparation course. Priority is given to students from diverse and underrepresented backgrounds with demonstrated financial need.
